This document serves as a style guide and primary reference for the successful application of the Crosscut brand signature.

Organizations dedicate a tremendous amount of time and effort in creating trademarks which symbolize their aims and activities. But effective symbols do not survive simply by residing in the marketplace, or by being mindlessly applied to products. A trademark must be tended to remain fresh and alive.

When carefully monitored and tended, a trademark can be one of the most valuable assets an institution owns. In an increasingly competitive environment, the name and trademark of an institution can reinforce the image of a powerful player, thus protecting the franchise an institution owns. Consistently applied branding sends a credible and reliable signal at moments of critical commercial interaction in an institution's life.

The standards for the Crosscut branding contained in this document are appropriately applied to advertising, newsletters, web, presentation materials, as well as collateral items such as brochures, banners and specialty items.

The reward for Crosscut lies in results which derive from flexible, durable and accessible image-building tools. The brand acts as a sales agent for Crosscut, carrying an accurate message of the institution's vision to the farthest and most intricate reaches of public communications.

Founded in 2007, Crosscut was a pioneer in the national landscape of local, online-only news outlets. Working out of coffee shops and hole-in-the-wall offices, its small team of writers broke fresh ground on topics such as transportation, homelessness and the reshaping of the urban landscape. As other news outlets downsized, Crosscut moved into beats that were being abandoned, including city and state government. The work began winning awards and getting noticed, especially in the halls of power.

In 2015, Crosscut merged with KCTS 9 public television under the umbrella of a single nonprofit called Cascade Public Media. Today, our combined staff of reporters, video producers and web developers fills an essential role in the Northwest's news ecosystem, focusing on politics and public policy, race and equity, arts and culture and the environment. We tell stories and provide context and analysis that helps people understand our fast-changing region and how they can be a part of shaping it for the better.

KEY TENETS OF OUR WORK INCLUDE:

- Spotlighting solutions: While one of journalism's central jobs is to shine a light on wrongdoing and injustice, we believe it is critical to go one step further and examine possible solutions to our thorniest problems.
- Collaborating and sharing: To maximize our reach and impact, we drive powerful collaborations among media organizations, and work closely with local nonprofits to access new audiences. Our articles, videos and multimedia reporting are often made available at no cost to other regional news outlets.
- Engaging our community: From our solution-seeking Community Idea Labs and the annual Courage Awards breakfast to the innovative Crosscut Festival, we create spaces for inclusive, civic discussion about the most pressing issues of our day.
- Measuring impact: We closely monitor not only online audience engagement and television viewership, but also social media activity, attention from key community and political influencers, shifts in the regional civic and political dialogue, and public policy reform.

The logo consists of the complete Crosscut name rendered in letter forms in a strictly defined array. Crosscut logo or mark is rendered in a customized font.

The signature consists of the word “Crosscut” by itself, rendered in custom letter forms, as shown below.

The mark is to be used alone, primarily on social media.

Careful attention must be paid to the placement of the Crosscut logo. In most documents, the logo is most appropriately placed in the upper left-hand corner. In most images or graphics, the logo is most appropriately placed in the lower right-hand corner. Multiple logos should not be used on the same page or in close proximity to each other. Minimum spacing must be respected at all times. Logo placement must not obstruct the clarity or readability of the logo.

When selecting photographs for Crosscut, look for emotional content and unusual perspectives that tell a story. Choose edgy images with high contrast, rich colors and texture. Crosscut photos should convey the organization’s dedication to diversity, its global perspective and its focus on forward thinking. Photos of people should be candid, rather than straight-on shots.

EXAMPLES:

Crosscut has several sub-brands representing regular events and services. The logos for these sub-brands can be found on the G drive for use in both print and digital applications. For questions about their use, please consult the contacts listed at the end of this document.
